My Darling Clarence,

I find it hard
-to go- to bed without a goodnight kiss, though I am already to turn my gas out and start for dreamland. I went down and called on Miss Mae Van this afternoon. She is very beautiful, Claire, she quite reminds me of Cleopatra with those fathomless depths in her beautiful eyes. She said it was a great surprise to her, as she had pictured me in her mind's eye, as a very little girl. Her room mate has just gone and she simply begged me to come and live with her.

I should like her very much I am sure, but I could not endure the foul-ness of her room, and the neighborhood likewise. I realize how fortunate I am when I see how others are placed. I do not think I want her to come and room with me, however, because I should not be able to live my own life, then, and it would seem as if she came between you and me.

She is coming down to spend the afternoon with me, next Sunday. and she is going to invite Oscar Lowell to meet me some evening. He is a celebrated painter, We were school-mates together all through grammar school. I had no letters today but shall no doubt have some tomorrow. I go to Madame for my 3rd lesson tomorrow morning. Well darling, I must say goodnight, and God watch between us while we are apart one from the other.

Your own loving girlie

Grace

P.S. Do you know, you have written me just 26 letters since we have belonged to each other. How many have I written you? I must tell you.
